NEW DISCLOSURE OBLIGATIONS FOR SELLERS IN QUEENSLAND

Factsheet

The laws regulating property sales in Queensland have changed. From 1 August 2025, a seller must give a disclosure statement to a buyer before they sign a contract to purchase property.

The disclosure statement must:

- be in the approved form (Form 2 Seller Disclosure Statement under the Property Law Act 2023 (Qld))
- be completed with information required under the law;
- have prescribed certificates/documents attached to the statement;
- be signed by the seller/s; and
- be given to the buyer in a way that complies with the legislation.

Frequently Asked Questions

Who prepares the disclosure statement?

Either the seller, their agent or their solicitor can prepare the disclosure statement. It is the seller's decision as to who will prepare the disclosure statement on their behalf. Please note, real estate agents are legally permitted to prepare the disclosure statement on behalf of a seller, if authorised to do so. Agents are limited to inserting information that has been provided by the Client or received by the Agent from a third party search provider, if the Client has instructed the Agent to undertake searches on the Client's behalf.

Where do you find the information that is needed to prepare a disclosure statement?

Most of the information required should be within the seller's knowledge or possession. There are some items that will require searches to be undertaken, and the seller will need to pay for those searches.

Information that will generally be within the seller's knowledge includes:

- if there is a swimming pool and current compliance certificate
- if there is an unregistered lease or agreement (in writing or verbal) that impacts the property
- information about residential tenancy or rooming accommodation agreements
- if the seller has received a transport infrastructure proposal or notice of intention to resume
- if building work has been undertaken on the property under an owner-builder licence in the past 6 years
- if the seller has received a show cause notice, enforcement notice or any other type of notice/order from the government or an authority (eg. QBCC), requiring work to be done or money spent in relation to the property (for example, getting a structure approved by council)
- the current rates and water service information

NOTE: The Agent cannot provide advice to a seller about what is required to be disclosed. If a seller has any questions about whether a matter needs to be disclosed, they should seek legal advice.

When should the disclosure statement be prepared?

Unless an exemption applies, a contract should not be signed if the disclosure statement has not been provided to the buyer. If searches are needed, some may take several weeks to return. It is best practice to start preparing the disclosure statement as soon as the seller has appointed the agent, to ensure that a contract is not delayed once the property is listed.

NOTE: The Agent cannot provide advice to a seller about what is required to be disclosed. If a seller has any questions about whether a matter needs to be disclosed, or notices to be provided, they should seek legal advice.

INSTRUCTIONS:

- The Disclosure Instructions and Search Authority should be completed if the Client has authorised and instructed the Agent to prepare the Seller Disclosure Statement under Item 4 of the Appointment of Property Agent.

- If the Client is not sure of how to answer a question or whether a particular arrangement or encumbrance needs to be disclosed, the Client should seek legal advice. The Agent cannot provide advice to the Client about what matters need to be disclosed in a Seller Disclosure Statement. The Agent is limited to inserting information as provided by the Client in this document, and received by the Agent from third party search providers as shown in the authority.
